

● Breaking: Comedian Don Rickles dies at 90

commuter rail service

DAVID L. RYAN/GLOBE STAFF

MBTA mechanics protested efforts to privatize the agency Monday. The T says it could save $27.6 million by privatizing some bus garages.

By Nicole Dungca | GLOBE STAFF MARCH 13, 2017

---

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority is proposing to eliminate all weekend commuter rail service and tens of thousands of door-to-door rides for passengers with disabilities, part of a slate of cost-cutting moves meant to close a $42 million budget deficit.

The proposed cuts, far more dramatic than many advocates expected, could potentially take effect in July and last for a year if they are approved by the agency's fiscal and management control board, but officials have yet to present a clear timeline.

Stephanie Pollack, the state's transportation secretary, said sharp reductions are needed to balance the budget and invest more in other parts of the agency.

She also indicated the agency is putting the idea forward to prompt a broad debate over the MBTA's priorities.

"We need to ask questions about what we want to run," she said Monday.

The scope of the proposal spurred swift opposition. Paul Regan, executive director of the MBTA Advisory Board, which represents the communities that receive MBTA service, urged officials to reconsider scuttling weekend commuter rail service.

Get Fast Forward in your inbox:

Forget yesterday's news. Get what you need today in this early-morning email.

Sign Up

“I know it’s a tempting target, but [service] is as necessary on the weekends as it is during the day,” he said. “There are people who rely on it.”

The board approved a preliminary budget for the next fiscal year, but made it clear the proposed service cuts are not a certainty. A final budget is due April 15.

“At this point, I would not vote for this as a budget,” said Brian Lang, a board member.

Under Governor Charlie Baker, the MBTA has adopted a number of unpopular changes taking aim at its chronic financial woes, including fare hikes and the elimination of late-night subway and bus service. But Monday’s proposals were more sweeping.

Carolyn Villers, executive director of the Mass Senior Action Council, an advocacy group for senior citizens, said cutbacks to The Ride, the agency’s door-to-door service for disabled passengers, would have major ramifications.

“For some, it would mean they lose access to their medical and family connections,” she said. “Now, people are living in fear that they could lose their transportation.”

Mayor Martin J. Walsh said at a news conference that canceling weekend commuter rail service or trips for disabled riders would be difficult decisions, and that he had concerns.

Eliminating weekend commuter rail service would save about $10 million, officials said, while reducing certain trips on The Ride would save $7.4 million.

The MBTA is federally required to provide door-to-door service within certain areas around bus and subway stops, but currently provides, for a higher price, trips that go beyond those areas through The Ride. The MBTA proposal would eliminate trips that are three-fourths of a mile away from bus and subways stops, affecting areas in a dozen suburbs, including Concord, Topsfield, and Medfield.

Cuts to The Ride would affect about 8,000 people and more than 200,000 trips, the MBTA estimated.

The Ride's expense has made it a frequent target of budget cuts. The board has met with advocates to study ways to reduce costs and recently implemented a program using Uber and Lyft rides to supplement service.

But MBTA officials say more cuts are necessary.

Eliminating weekend commuter rail service would also affect thousands. According to May 2016 statistics from Keolis Commuter Services, the company that runs the commuter rail, trains provided about 8,300 trips heading toward Boston on Saturdays and 4,500 on Sundays.

Keolis did not provide numbers on outbound trips in its report, but previous counts have shown significantly more passengers. During fiscal 2013, about 25,700 trips were recorded on Saturdays, and about 21,000 on Sundays.

Stay updated, right in your news feed.

Stay updated, right in your news feed.

Stay updated, right in your news feed.

---

Most Popular In Metro →

---

THE SUMMER THAT CHANGED BOSTON

The nation was splintering, and Boston wasn't immune. But something was happening here. Boston had long treated its ball club as an afterthought, but then on Opening Day 1967: the first glimmer of an implausible dream. MORE...

---

Only Hernandez is linked to 'murder car' and 'murder weapon,' prosecutor says

In closing arguments, Aaron Hernandez's defense team told jurors the prosecution's case was "riddled" with "lies" from star witness Alexander Bradley. MORE...

---

Thunderstorms could spawn tornado in Southeastern Mass.

A powerful weather system dumped buckets of rain on Massachusetts Thursday. MORE...

---

R.I.P. Supreme Phil A. Buster, 1806-2017

The Supreme Court filibuster died on April 6, 2017. He was 211 years old. MORE...

---

Commuter rail delays blamed on defect in new locomotives

Defects in the MBTA's newest locomotives have left the system without enough trains to provide full service. MORE...

---

Motley to step down as UMass Boston chancellor

J. Keith Motley will step down at the end of the academic year amid a cloud of unrest on the campus over its financial problems. MORE...

---

Tito Jackson apologizes for pushing arm of WGBH reporter

Jackson, a Boston city council member and mayoral candidate, apologized after the station manager sent him a letter of complaint about the incident. MORE...

---

'Old Ironsides' restoration nearing completion

During the restoration process, the ship has remained open to visitors. MORE...

---

Hodgson, Curtatone spar in heated debate over immigration

"We're a country of laws," Bristol Sheriff Thomas Hodgson said. Somerville Mayor Joseph Curtatone pointed out laws apply to undocumented immigrants as well. MORE...

---

For social studies teachers, WWI presents a growing challenge

Though the conflict set the stage for today's complex problems, many Americans know little about the war. MORE...

---

Quadruplet brothers from Ohio are all accepted to both Harvard and Yale

The Wade brothers have all been admitted at some of the nation's top universities, including each of them to both Yale and Harvard. MORE...

---

MIT study shows deeper look at how memories are stored

The seeds of both short-term and long-term recollections are planted nearly simultaneously in the brains of mice. MORE...

---

Boston's newest crop of firefighters is made up entirely of veterans

Many of the veterans who graduated from the Boston Fire Academy had seen combat overseas. MORE...

---

Trial of man accused of poisoning Stephen Rakes set to begin in Woburn

Willam Camuti allegedly poisoned Rakes, a former South Boston man who was a victim of James "Whitey" Bulger, because he owed the victim money.

MORE...

---

Kennedy Institute reveres a Senate that doesn't exist

Growing numbers of people have lost their faith, unable to imagine the Senate as majestic. MORE...

---

On Immigrants' Day, advocates urge legislators to pass 'sanctuary state' bill

After speeches, a peaceful crowd of about 100 people hoisted signs supporting immigrants in a rally on Boston Common. MORE...

---

Lawyer in Dunkin' butter case: $90,000 payout 'not actually profitable'

An attorney explained why a settlement paying $90,000 to lawyers, but just $500 to the man who brought the lawsuit, is not unfair. MORE...

---

Boston schools ditch conventional world maps in favor of this one

Social studies classrooms throughout the Boston public school system are getting an upgrade some 448 years in the making. MORE...

---

Real journalists. Real journalism. Subscribe to The Boston Globe today.

Subscribe Now

Digital Access

Home Delivery

My Account

Log in

Manage my Account

Mobile Customer Service

Sign Up For Newsletters

Contact

Help

FAQs

Globe newsroom

Advertise

Order Back Issues

Social

Facebook

Twitter

Google+

More

ePaper

News in Education

Archives

Privacy policy

Terms of service

Terms of purchase

Your Ad Choices

Work at Boston Globe Media

© 2017 Boston Globe Media Partners, LLC

4 of 5 free articles. Subscribe now >